How do you say thank you to a perfect stranger? I ask myself this as I sit here and try to express in words the feelings I am having. I could bore you with self defeating stories of how difficult my life had become. Stories of violence, stories of pain, but I shall not. This is a story of hope, of moving forward, of the restoration of faith, in God, in myself, and in mankind. I sit here in utter awe at the kindness you have bestowed upon me and my four children, and thank you from the deepest parts of my soul. You have given me the means to move forward with my life in both a physical sense and a spiritual one. I teach my children that there are good people in this world and that they should always practice random acts of kindness, and that they should move forward in the face of adversity. You never know what will come. I thank you for giving me this chance to move forward and for restoring my faith. I shall pay your kindness forward.

God bless you.

Sincerely

Nancy
